

The National Police Wildlife Crime Officers Training Course

The only accredited course of its kind in England & Wales

Since its concept in 1997 this national course has grown from strength to strength, and achieved a landmark in 2014, having reached 1000 staff trained, and now in its 20th year. A fantastic achievement which could not have been possible without the full support of many of the valuable contributions, and support from the partners. The course has continually been reviewed, and has recently undergone a further process to ensure that it achieves its aims, and objectives, and delivers value for money, and keeps in line with current Police training requirements, and delivers on the national priorities. It is open to all staff involved within enforcement, and has recently seen many Community support officers, special constables, forensic staff, and other support staff attending.

The course is delivered, and managed by two retired police officers who have over 44 years' experience between them, and they are supported by specialists in their fields, and this is what makes this course such a success. We are keen to ensure that the course is kept to this multi-agency style approach. The Partnership for Action against Wildlife Crime (PAW) Conference and Training Group oversees the training and ensures that it meets current demands.

It is the only course of its kind within the UK currently to achieve such a high level of education during the week long course, and the accreditation through PAW, is recognised now by a number of external organisations, and is seen by several police forces as best practice.

The content includes the National Wildlife Crime Unit (NWCU), CITES, Wild Birds, poisoning and pesticides, protected species, bats, badgers, hunting, poaching, traps, plants, cruel sports, and health and safety issues. It has been run recently out of the Police College Bramshill, but with the sale of that estate, will be moving to a new home, which will be Yarnfield Conference Centre, Staffordshire (since 2015).

Costs are kept to a minimum but there is the need to charge for the course, to meet accommodation, meals, classrooms, IT, printing, and mileage for some of the guest organisations. We have fought to keep the costs down, and there has been no increase since 2011.

Course dates for 2017 are weeks beginning 20th March & 25th Sept 2017.

The course cost for 2017 is £800.00, which includes accommodation.

Full multi-agency training provision

An essential feature of wildlife law enforcement is a multi-agency partnership approach. This is being fully reflected in the course with the support and participation of many Governmental and non-Governmental organisations. Representatives of UKBA, JNCC, DEFRA, RSPCA and RSPB, BCT, LACS, NE to name but a few, are amongst those who have either provided advice or will be present during the course.

Health and Safety focus

As Police Forces take on Health and Safety legislation the course addresses the needs of WCO's. The requirements of Risk Assessing, and techniques to minimise risks from the many hazards confronting the WCO will be a strong feature of the course.

Course Aim

The aim of the course is therefore:-

"To equip officers with the ability to undertake investigations in a safe and efficient manner within a multi-agency framework where appropriate".
